Mr. Grote Reber
C.S.I.R.O.
Stowell Avenue
Hobart, Tasmania, Australia

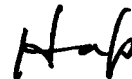

Dear Grote:

On the brink of my perennial venture into porcupine country, herewith a brief note and an enclosure. While I'm sure you won't envy the Utahans this little counting gadget, I thought you might be interested in it. Noting the last sentence, I am not sure if we should point with pride or otherwise to the fact of a $5,000 grant from here that launched the project.

Please don't quote me but your letter to SCIENCE attracted interested attention in several areas, and even kicked up a bit of a dust storm in the Bureau of the Budget during its review of some of the NSF proposed projects.

Departing to a totally different subject, we may be directing a very interesting traveler toward you in the course of the coming year, if indeed your stay extends that long. A recent grant is helping foot the bill for a very intriguing-sounding young character getting his doctorate in geography at Cambridge. His dissertation will be based upon a retracing of the footsteps of HMS Beagle, or at least those of its most notable passenger. I'll provide more information on this score if it seems likely that you two may meet down there.

Best wishes,

Charles H. Schauer
