Dear Grote:

It is with very real regret that I confirm what you may have suspected; that is, that I have weaseled out on the trip down under, at least for this spring.

I was quite interested in the literature on the Vanguard (four-wheel type, not in orbit). I hadn't realized that there still was a car currently manufactured that could be cranked by hand.

I should apologize for the extended lapse in my correspondence but have felt we were reasonably well in touch by virtue of your correspondence with Jennie.

I can't think of anything particularly newsworthy from here and so will close on a slightly wistful note of regret at not having made the trip I threatened you with.

Best wishes,

Charles H. Schauer
