Dear Sir:

Quite a few years ago I intended to do some radio astronomy observations of northern sky. Accordingly, I transferred substantial funds to Canada. Over the years these have grown. Today my ideas have changed. My original plans will not be carried out. What to do with the money? There is over four million dollars. I'd like to turn them over to some worthy organization. There is no rush. I expect to be around for another five to ten years, maybe even more. However, I'd like to settle this matter before the last minute. Please have your attorney send to me some literature on this subject. I am,

Yours faithfully,
