Dear Mr. Reber:

In a forthcoming article on radio astronomy for our ADVENTURES OF THE MIND series, A.C.B. Lovell mentions your pioneering work in this field. To identify you to our readers, we need some such brief descriptive phrase as "American engineer and amateur radio astronomer." Would this be an appropriate designation?

The only reasonably current reference information we have available on you is an entry in American Men of Science, which was published in 1955.

The Lovell article is presently scheduled for our October 15 issue.

Thank you for any help you can give us.

Sincerely,

Morton D. Hull
