Dear Grote:

It was a real disappointment to me to receive your last letter because it contains evidence that your attitude toward life in general and me in particular hasn't changed one bit. This situation is less than conducive to any productive talks with you, and I hesitate to go out of my way to be berated by you as the tone of your letter indicates might well happen.

Please keep this in mind in your future communications because certainly there is no point in getting together for a talk if nothing productive can result. I've tried to get this across to you for the past three years, but with no success.

Let me know when you expect to be in Memphis and I will make a reservation for you at the Hotel Peabody which is the best hotel in town. Let me know your approximate time of arrival and I will call you to arrange to come down to the hotel and see you. I will be out of town part of January so alternative dates from you would be helpful in making the necessary arrangements. I'll also be travelling during February and March.

Please respect my wishes as outlined in the above paragraph because I'm sure you wish to avoid any unpleasantness which would inevitably result if you barged in on us unannounced.

Sincerely yours,
